FULL LEATHER JACKETS

From a Biker style to a Racer, from a Hunter to an Aviator Shearling Jacket, you can find or develop any style in any practically any kind of leather. If you can imagine it, we can produce it.

Among the most common leathers we can use are those that are processed from cow, horse, pig, and sheep hides, being these last ones the most appreciated for the manufacture of clothing for its ease of processing, its great resistance and great softness.

Suede is also a very resourceful material and consists in leathers that are finished by buffing the flesh side (opposite the grain side) to produce a nap. The term refers to the napping process and is unrelated to the type and origin of skin used.

VARSITY JACKETS

Retro has never stopped being a trend, some silhouettes are here to stay and continue to appear again and again over the years, and the varsity jacket is one of them. An all times basic the varsity jacket has undergone many changes throughout its history since the 30's.
